KAYE'S WORSDELL'S PILLS. EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF A CASE OF DROPSY IN SIX WEEKS.

The following is a Testimonial received through Mr. WATSON, Bookseller, Gateshead. "28th September, 1861. My Wife, Esther Gowes, was taken very ill indeed of Dropsy, so much so that her life was despaired of. I had no less than four Doctors attending her since last October, till about two months ago; they could do no good for her whatever, and at last, informed me that they could do nothing more for her—that there was but one cure, namely, Death. "In this extremity, happening to remember of some acquaintance who received a great deal of benefit from the use of KAYE'S WORSDELL'S RESTORATIVE PILLS, I procured a box from Mr G. Watson, Bottle Lane, your Agent, I believe, for Gateshead, and so much benefit did she derive from them, that I had several more boxes, which really have astonished me in their effect—especially after what the Doctors had told me. She is now perfectly recovered, and going about again; and so confident am I of their attending qualities, that I determined to place this Testimonial in the hands of Mr Watson, to be forwarded to the Proprietors of the Medicine, and any one is at liberty to apply to me for confirmation of the above, for which purpose I beg to send my address, and—" "Yours respectfully, "THOMAS GOWES, "Felling Shore, near Gateshead."

BARNARD-CASTLE POLICE COURT. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25th. Before J. Mitchell and J. Gray, Esqrs.

TRANSACTIONS OF LICENSES.—The license of the Red Lion Inn was transferred from George Fawcett, the late tenant, to William Graham. The license of the Greyhound public-house was transferred from Thomas Gregson to John Brown, of Cockfield. This application was made some weeks ago, but owing to the applicant having once kept a barhouse at Cockfield being fined, it was refused, but he now presented a testimonial, signed by a number of the tradesmen in the market-place.—Mr Mitchell enquired if this house was required for the town. Mr Richardson, the magistrates' clerk, thought they could do with a diminution of ten.—The license was, nevertheless, transferred, coupled, however, with a caution to the applicant.

HIGHWAY ACT.—William Reine, John Shaw, and Henry Young were charged by Robert Parker, surveyor of the highways of Winston and Newsham, the former with making a fire on the highway at Newsham, and the latter with injuring the surface of the road. Mr Bourne, of Staindrop, appeared for the defendants. Complaint was taken cutting a drain across the road. They never obtained leave of him and when he requested them to desist, they refused. As he was liable for accidents caused by the bad condition of the road, he was only doing his duty in bringing the case forward. Mr Bourne said the case was brought under the 77th section of the Highway Act, which stated wilful damage, and he contended in this case it was not wilful, inasmuch as the road had again been made perfect. The surveyor said it was not in the same good state as at first. Mr Bourne in answer to the bench, said that there was no act requiring notice to be served upon the surveyor.—Mr Mitchell quoted the case just settled before the Court of Queen's Bench, in which Mr Train was fined £500 for breaking the soil of the highway and neglecting to restore it to its former condition.—The bench said the road ought to be made perfect, and allowed the case to stand over for that purpose.

BREACH OF THE PEACE.—Thos. Walker, Joiner, was charged by Wm. Stokell with a breach of the peace, early on the morning of the 12th inst. Complaint said he lived on the moor, and defendant reportedly came to his door while he was in bed. He had always forgiven him, owing to his father being a respectable man. On the morning in question defendant came and punched at the door and made use of bad language and several threats. Defendant denied the charge.—Sarah Dixon proved complainant's statement and preferred a charge of assault against defendant. She said that on the morning of the 12th inst. he came to her house, made use of bad language, and broke her window. She got out of bed and went to the window when he struck her in the face. Defendant denied this charge also. He was ordered to find two sureties of £5 to keep the peace, in the first case, and in the latter was fined 10s. and costs.

ASSAULT.—Thomas and William Borrowdale, the former a publican in Thorgate, and the latter his son, who is about 17, were charged with an assault upon Morris Davis, mason, on the 24th inst. Complainant, who appeared with his face all covered with bruises, and his left arm in a sling, stated that yesterday afternoon, he went into defendant's house. Defendant was coming out of the parlour, and directly he saw him, he got a stick and immediately felled him, dragged him to the door, and 'whilst in a state of insensibility' defendant and his son kicked him. James McFarlane said he did not see any squabble in the house, but saw Borrowdale throw complainant into the street and kicked him.—Sarah Allison corroborated this statement.—Mr William Kipling, surgeon, deposed to finding several bruises upon his head caused by some instrument. He appeared to have been stunned, and should think he had had drink. There were marks of two or three blows.—The defence was that complainant went into the defendant's house on Monday, in a state of intoxication. Defendant told him to go out or he would use the poker to him. Complainant set himself in his fighting position. Defendant told him again to go out, and as he still refused he put him out.—Complainant repeated the same conduct yesterday, and defendant admitted taking a stick and threatening him, but he did not strike. They closed, and he succeeded in throwing complainant on the floor, and that had caused the wounds. There was a bad feeling between them; complainant having taken away his daughter, seduced her, and kept her away six weeks. John Hopper gave evidence for the defence.—The bench said from the defendant's own showing there was an ill-feeling between them. It was his duty as a publican to have sent for the police, and not taken the law into his own hands. His house was for public accommodation, and he could not pick his customers. There certainly had been protection, and on that account they should only fine him 5s and costs. There was no evidence against the son, and he was acquitted.

HEARTLESS SEDUCTION AND ROBBERY AT SUNDERLAND.—The Market of Sunderland has been the scene of great excitement in consequence of the elopement of a shopkeeper's wife with her husband's partner, the guilty party carrying off with them all the ready cash they could lay their hands on. The male rascal was formerly a schoolmaster at Millfield, near Sunderland. He commenced his career in the Market some time ago, and afterwards took in an injured friend as partner. They subsequently opened another shop in Middlebro', the partner going over to manage it, and leaving his wife behind at Sunderland. The fellow took advantage of this to seduce the wife, leaving his own wife and children residing all the time at Manchester. The wife recently went over to her husband at Middlebro', he was taken mysteriously ill, advised to come to Sunderland, the other man went over, and the pair left about ten days ago—pretending to go to the markets to buy goods, and to return to her husband at Sunderland. They have never been seen since, however, and it is supposed they are now on the way across the Atlantic. They had been gathering together money and luggage for some days previously, but the injured husband never suspected anything, because of the plausible pretence and his long profession of religion and morality, nor did he discover their flight from Middlebro', till a day or two afterwards. The male runaway has left behind him a wife and two children, and the female, her husband and four children, one of whom is an infirm one. The seducer had the assurance to write letters to his injured partner, to the mother of the woman, and to his own wife, couched in a pious strain, apologetic of the elopement, and using the name of the Almighty with a prayer that good might come out of evil! Much sympathy has been expressed on all sides for the poor man who has thus been robbed and deceived.

VIOLENT AND INDECENT ASSAULT.—On Monday night, a most brutal and indecent assault was committed upon a woman, named Susannah Ward. Mrs Ward is 45 years of age; she is a married woman, with four children, and resides in Hull, near to where her husband works in the docks. She has been lodging for the last few days with a brother-in-law, in Peel Lane, Thornton Street, Newcastle. On Monday, she went to Shields to see her son, who is a sailor; and who was going away to sea that day. In the evening, she walked up to Newcastle; and, on her road, before reaching Byker, met a tall man with moustaches and wearing a black coat and a round hat. She asked this man the road to Newcastle, and he offered to show her. It was then about half-past ten o'clock, and they went together to the Farmer's Arms, at the head of Elwick's Lane, and there had some drink. They left the public-house, and he conducted her to the Ouseburn Railway Bridge, which they crossed. Breaching Byker Hill, they went up a lane into a field, and he then threw her down upon the ground and attempted an indecent assault, saying "You b—n—r, if you scream out, I'll take your life." They struggled together; and, falling in his brutal attempt, he forced her out a precipice believed to be a quarry, near the railroad, and immediately made off. The poor woman managed to find her way, on her hands and knees to the lane, where there were three men, who had been attracted by her screams. With great difficulty she succeeded in reaching the house of a Mr Short, Byker Hill, about two o'clock in the morning. Information was immediately sent to the police station, Ouseburn and two policemen went and conveyed her to the station Mr S. W. Kaye, and Mr English, his assistants, were seen in attendance, and recommended her to be sent to the Infirmary. A stretcher was procured, and she was conveyed there; and it was found that she had been most shamefully treated. Her shawl was torn to pieces, and she sustained a compound fracture of the right leg, two of her front teeth had been knocked out, and her face was so much swollen that she was unable to see. A leather bag which she carried was almost entirely destroyed. The man had stated to her that he belonged Shields, and would be on the Moor to bet upon the horses at the race. Every inquiry is being made to find him.
