the setting up of an administration which has begun to win the confidence of the German people. I was struck when being taken round an ersatz rubber factory near Hamburg, where one would expect to see sullen faces, to find men and women on the machines only too ready to talk and explain what, they were doing. I think that is a great credit to the British Military Government that they have started to dispel this fear. Without dispelling it, there would be little hope of making any immediate progress. To-day we have already heard how, after dealing with this first problem, we have to face a bigger problem of planning more permanent administration. We have the problems referred to in the motion of the Services Calteen Until the closing of the Services Calteen in the Parish Room he gave valuable, service in an official capacity. No one has shown a greater interest in Richmond's Old Theatre than Mr Bush, and he played an important part in its restoration which led to the revival and staging of plays there at intervals in the past few years. Mr Bush, misself a talented historian, derived much pleasure from that work. He used to be interested in the Y.M.C.A. movement when it was in being. A most unassuming and modest man, Mr Bush will have the best wishes of the community for his future welfare.
